

Four Puppet Politics

Consider the political economy of the US in terms of 4 sectors, Government, business, the media, and the public, with each controlling the next in a circle. Virtually everyone, even the top 1%, see themselves as victims of the system. For example, the media can't expose corruption in government, because they'd lose advertising.

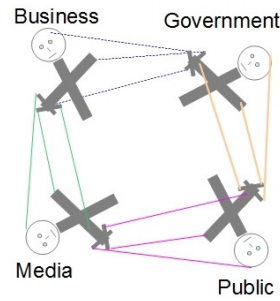

The US today produces double the goods and services per person as 40 years ago, but most of the gains have gone to those better off; see the accompanying figure.

One way out is for the bottom 99% to stop following the mainstream media and fund independent investigative journalism.

US Census Bureau Table F-1
www.cagreens.org/santaclara
 email: spencer.graves@prodsyse.com

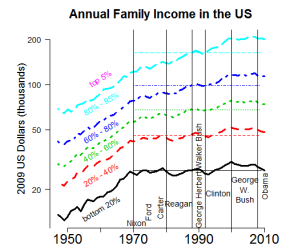

Four Puppet Politics

Consider the political economy of the US in terms of 4 sectors, Government, business, the media, and the public, with each controlling the next in a circle. Virtually everyone, even the top 1%, see themselves as victims of the system. For example, the media can't expose corruption in government, because they'd lose advertising.

The US today produces double the goods and services per person as 40 years ago, but most of the gains have gone to those better off; see the accompanying figure.

One way out is for the bottom 99% to stop following the mainstream media and fund independent investigative journalism.

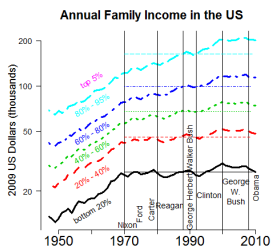

US Census Bureau Table F-1
www.cagreens.org/santaclara
 email: spencer.graves@prodsyse.com

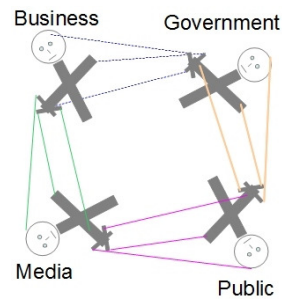

services per person as 40 years ago, but most of the gains have gone to those better off; see the accompanying figure.

One way out is for the bottom 99% to stop following the mainstream media and fund independent investigative journalism.

US Census Bureau Table F-1
www.cagreens.org/santaclara
 email: spencer.graves@prodsyse.com

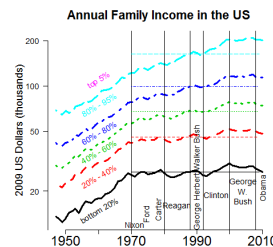

Four Puppet Politics

Consider the political economy of the US in terms of 4 sectors, Government, business, the media, and the public, with each controlling the next in a circle. Virtually everyone, even the top 1%, see themselves as victims of the system. For example, the media can't expose corruption in government, because they'd lose advertising.

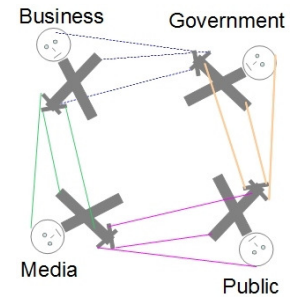

The US today produces double the goods and services per person as 40 years ago, but most of the gains have gone to those better off; see the accompanying figure.

One way out is for the bottom 99% to stop following the mainstream media and fund independent investigative journalism.

US Census Bureau Table F-1
www.cagreens.org/santaclara
 email: spencer.graves@prodsyse.com

Four Puppet Politics

Consider the political economy of the US in terms of 4 sectors, Government, business, the media, and the public, with each controlling the next in a circle. Virtually everyone, even the top 1%, see themselves as victims of the system. For example, the media can't expose corruption in government, because they'd lose advertising.

The US today produces double the goods and